Richard Hardisty to Chief Commissioner James Grahame, 5 June 1878: Mr. Louis Chastellain, an aged servant of the Hudson's Bay Company, has now retired from their service after serving them faithfully for over 40 years. I feel it my duty to state that I consider he is entitled to some consideration, which, I am sure, every other officer in the Service, acquainted with the man, will agree. I now beg to lay before you this request that the Governor and Committee will be pleased to grant him a Pension for the few remaining years of his life.

Hardisty to Grahame, 2 Sept. 1878: Mr. Louis Chastellain prefers going into the Trade for a living than depend on an yearly pension of £25. So that settles his case.
