

Young Employees

Minimum standards such as general holidays, vacations, minimum wage and termination apply to all employees regardless of age. Young people who are 13, 14, or 15 years of age need to complete a Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course before they can begin working, and there are rules that restrict their hours of employment and the types of work they can perform.

What should employers, young people, parents and educators expect?

Employer: Before young people are allowed to start work, they must complete the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course. As the employer, you must be provided with their Certificate of Completion that is signed by their parent/guardian. You must also know and follow the rules that restrict young peoples' hours of employment and the types of work they can perform.

Young people: You must take the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course to understand your rights and responsibilities in an employment relationship. When you have successfully completed the course and received your Certificate of Completion, you can begin working as long as your parent has given signed consent. You would provide the employer with a copy of the signed Certificate.

Parent/Guardian: You must understand the work restrictions for young people and decide if you consent to your child working. If you do consent, you will sign your child's Certificate of Completion.

Educators: You can use this course to prepare young people to enter the workforce.

Why do young people need to know their rights and responsibilities as employees?

All employers and employees need to know their rights and responsibilities before they agree to an employment arrangement. Young people can be vulnerable, and knowing their rights helps protect them in the workplace.

Starting a job is like signing an agreement. Employers have certain responsibilities, but employment agreements also put responsibilities on employees. Coming to work when scheduled, following instructions and safety rules at work and giving proper notice to end a job are all employee obligations.

Why do young people need a Young Worker Readiness Certificate?

No one wants a young person to be hurt at work. The Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course teaches young people about Employment Standards and Workplace Safety and Health requirements.

Can children under 13 years of age be employed?

No, children under 13 years of age cannot be employed.

Do I need to take the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course?

If you are 13, 14 or 15 years of age, you need to take the course. You do not need to take the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course if you are:

- An independent contractor or self-employed. This may include babysitting, delivering flyers, or cleaning a yard in the neighborhood.
- A volunteer for a charitable organization or are given work experience through a school or government-approved program.
- Working on a farm for a family member in the primary production of agricultural products, such as livestock or grain.

Who is approved by the Director of Employment Standards to administer a work readiness certificate course?

SAFE Work Manitoba's Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course is approved by the Director of Employment Standards.

I have a Child Employment Permit. Do I need to take the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course?

If you want to work for a different employer than the one on the permit, and you are 13, 14 or 15 years of age, you need to take the course.

As long as you work for the same employer named on the permit, you do not need to take the course.

At what age can young people start working?

All young people 13, 14 or 15 years of age must complete the Young Worker Readiness Certificate Course, and obtain a Certificate of Completion that is signed by their parent/guardian before they can work.

Are there any restrictions on where young people 13, 14, or 15 years of age can work?

Yes, young people 13, 14, or 15 years of age cannot work:
